

Time Limit

Minimum tick attachment time for transmission of Lyme borreliosis (LB) in humans has never been established. Claims that removal of ticks within 24 or 48 hours of attachment will effectively prevent LB are not supported by the published data. LB infection, including co-infections, can never be excluded after a tick bite irrespective of attachment time.

lymestats.org